QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note: Here are the questions asked most frequently by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members at the VPI Agricultural Extension Service and/or Experiment Station supply the answers).

Q. How can I keep my lawn green during the winter.

A. Perennial grasses, such as blue grass, bent and fescue will stay fairly green during the winter if properly fertilized. Grasses such as Bermuda (high grass) and Zoysia grow only in the summer and remain brown and yellow in winter. Such grass may be top-seeded in September and October with redtop or rye grass for winter green. The other alternative would be to dye the grasses with commercial lawn paints which are now available.

Q. Should I produce my pig crop for the feeder market, or feed them out myself?

A. Your decision will depend on several factors, primarily the amount of grain you have available, and the market outlets. If you have plenty of grain, it will probably pay to feed the pigs yourself. On the other hand, the price outlook for the hog market in 1959 is somewhat lower than for this year.

Q. What makes my sweet potatoes too long, and what can I do about it?

A. Any one of several things may cause the trouble. Generally, if you plant a good variety, plant them about a foot apart, and provide plenty of potash in the soil, the potatoes should be all right.

Q. When is the best time to fertilize permanent pastures?

A. Fall, winter, or early spring. However, almost anytime will be all right if there is not too much growth on the pasture.

Q. How late in the fall and the early winter can old tobacco beds be treated to control weeds and grasses?

A. The temperature of the soil is the important factor. It should be about 50° F.

Q. How long should the drying off period be before a dairy cow is ready to calve again?

A. At least 60 days. The cow needs the dry period to build up body reserves, and cows that are milked up close to the next freshening date never do as well as they should in the next lactation.

DON'T SHOOT PHEASANTS, ASKS COMMISSION

The state game commission today warned hunters that the 600 Iranian blackneck pheasants liberated recently in Charles City, Surry and Halifax Counties are not legal game this fall.

"Please don't shoot these birds," said game biologist Herman J. Tuttle. Tuttle, in charge of the Foreign Game Introduction Program in Virginia, noted that they are the first blackneck pheasants to be released in the United States and that follow-up studies made since their release are encouraging. With complete protection for a few years, he explained, this new strain of pheasant may become established in Virginia and provide a wonderful addition to the list of game birds in the Old Dominion.

Although pure Iranian blackneck pheasants differ from Chinese ringneck pheasants in that blackneck cocks have no white on their necks, the birds liberated this fall were crosses between Iranian and Chinese birds, and many of the liberated cocks have more or less complete white rings on their necks, the biologist noted. Pure Iranian birds may be liberated in the future if the crosses do not succeed, he said.

Pheasants are legal game in Virginia only on shooting preserves, he concluded.

COWARD'S WAY OUT

Richmond.- A man was eating beans and hot dogs in a restaurant. His fork cut into a hot dog, but the end circled off his plate and went into the open handbag of a woman at the next table too engrossed in conversation to notice.

What to do? Apparently the social arbiters had never anticipated an orbiting hot dog. After hesitating, the man left without telling the woman.

DEER SEASON PROSPECTS GOOD

Virginia's deer hunters are looking forward to another bumper year, according to the Virginia Commission's game division chief, Richard H. Cross, Jr. Although season dates and sex and bag limits vary from county to county, 89 of Virginia's counties will be open to deer hunting this year, with antlerless deer being legal game in 46 counties, he pointed out.

West of the Blue Ridge, the six day season opened November 17, and will result in about 6,500 antlered bucks and 5,000 antlerless deer being legally taken, Cross estimated. East of the Blue Ridge, where the season will run through January 5 in most areas,, nearly identical results are anticipated, he said, which would bring the total for the state this year to roughly 23,000 deer harvested.

Cross explained that the Commission hopes to control the number of deer in the state by increasing the numbers of doe and fawn deer taken each year, thus preventing deer damage to crops.

The game division chief noted that 160,000 hunters are expected to pursue the state's deer herd, which now numbers about 200,000 animals. "Obviously, they won't all be successful," he concluded.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

The utility room is definitely an important part of new houses, and if the present trend keeps on, this room will become as commonplace as the kitchen. Women agree that there must be a place in the home where the washer and dryer can be operated with allied activities, such as ironing and sewing.

Most women ask for separate laundry units, a built-in-ironing board and a pair of porcelain tubs that can be used to hand-wash colored and white clothing, defrost large items such as twenty-five pound turkeys, cut flowers, and even bathe a baby.

The utility room, we are told, should be about 10 by 12 feet, located next to the kitchen, and have a door leading to the backyard. It should be decorated attractively so that a woman will want to work there.

It is a very good idea for the utility areas to have separate electrical circuits so that the washing machine and toaster can be operated simultaneously without fear of blowing a fuse.

The placement of electrical outlets brought heavy criticism from one group of women. They decried the practice of placing outlets above baseboard level in rooms other than the kitchen and the bathroom. More outlets are needed in every room in the average home.

Outdoor living areas are extremely important to the modern family life. However, the tendency of late to ignore the importance of a utility yard that is planned with the thought and effort as the garden, is always a mistake in a family yard.

A recent survey showed the swimming pool was not favored by the majority of homemakers as a backyard fixture. The main reasons given were safety factors and the loss of too much yard area.

BE ON ALERT FOR SHIPPING FEVER

Watch out for a fall season "hitch-hiker" which may ride in with the movement of cattle and sheep from pastures to feed lots.

That's the advice from VPI specialists who say that the unwelcome "guest" is shipping fever which annually takes a toll of around $25,000,000 among cattle producers alone. The disease acts on the animals somewhat like flu in human beings.

Authorities are continuing their research on shipping fever. They believe that the stress of shipment, including fatigue, crowding, and irregular watering, and feeding, increases the susceptibility of the animals. Symptoms include a high fever, rapid breathing, complicating pneumonia, cough, and reduction or loss of appetite.

Since the disease is infectious, newly arrived feeder stock should be quarantined for a time so animals in the home herd will not be exposed. They should be given quiet surroundings, good shelter, plenty of good water. If shipping fever develops, call your veterinarian.
